

What is China - What is Critical Reasoning

8-18-2023

Or, why there has been no broad base structural change to confront the numerous crises facing humanity. China's conversion to capitalism is a fucked up testament that defines the structural basis for the shiftiness of this world. Note that I wrote 'shittiness' and the spell check preferred 'shiftiness'. That is machine learning AI fixing up the appearance of things. The facts are that the Chinese economy is two thirds conventional capitalism with private enterprise enterprise exploiting workers in the same manner as in the west – they are paid for an assigned value of their labor power based on the value of the commodities that they make. The 'communist' state sector has its own production capacity that does the same for CP faithful though it has a significant benefit in that it's not strictly tied to the market. That the state elite enriches itself along the lines of private capital is not even hidden. It's just not acknowledged, like not pointing to someone's open fly.

The source of much of the bogus communism that we have today is the result of Lenin's mistake. Instead of organizing a revolutionary party that was democratic and included workers. He created a top down system featuring a bureaucratic elite of professional communists that did all the thinking and planning which then passed it along as instructions to worker recruits in Russia. Luxemburg and Trotsky criticized Lenin's organizational structure as undemocratic and likely to result in a dictatorship. Trotsky even published a work in 1904 specifically in opposition to Lenin's organizational dictatorship predicting that will lead to the same being reproduced in a successful revolution. Which is precisely what happened. Fake Marxist Stalin worked his way up in the bureaucracy. Come the revolution he was in a position to make his move and systematically had all the best Marxists murdered – of course, only after being accused, by the real counter-revolutionary, as demons planning to destroy the revolution.

That is how China became the leader of the anti-Marxist fake revolutionary movement. Cuba came the closest to the real thing but made a grave mistake in not actively advancing its success to other countries. It is now close to having its revolution terminated by the US imposed blockade that is preventing the importation of the basic needs the nation. Of course, if that happens it will be declared as proof that democratic communism can never succeed.

The various crises that are confronting the people of the earth today are clearly rooted in the continuing existence of capitalism. This is obvious to all rational humans. The only solution, I believe, is to take up Rosa Luxemburg's understanding of ‘spontaneous’ uprising. These are not actually spontaneous but an unplanned mass rejection of existing conditions. They always fail because they have no revolutionary leadership. Eventually there will be a break in the ability of the powers that be to deny that they are the cause and must be thrown out. Speed the day toward that revolution.

- The system created to count employment in various age groups determined that 21% in the 16 to 24 age group were unemployed. The solution was to shut down the counting system for recalibration. Data for the 25-59 age group was withheld, but Beijing promised to release it soon. Having 11.59 million college graduate entering the labor market over a short period is certainly a factor along with the overall weakening economy. The situation is much worse for inexperienced job hunters. It’s said as being the worst since 1978.
- More evidence of a slowing economy is that the Hang Seng is now in bear territory.
